SECRET SERVICE HUNT FOR RED BOX

DISAPPEARANCE FROM TRAIN

SECRET ADMIRALTY DOCUMENTS

NEWCASTLE PROVIDES SOLUTION TO SPY SCARE

(SPECIAL TO "TELEGRAPH")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, August 4, 9.16 a.m.)

London, Aug. 3.

SECRET SERVICE AGENTS and officers of the Special Branch at Scotland Yard co-operated in a countrywide hunt for a number of confidential Admiralty documents, which disappeared between London and Portsmouth to-day.

Practically the entire secret service organisation and detectives in all parts of the country were organised for the search, passengers on all outgoing steamers being carefully scrutinised.

Visions of foreign spies were naturally conjured up, but when the solution of the riddle was obtained, it was revealed that all the excitement at the Admiralty was unnecessary.

The documents were sent from London to Portsmouth in a red despatch box and both the documents and the box disappeared.

GUN TRIAL REPORTS.

The train stopped at sixteen stations on the way down, plenty of opportunity thus being offered for the operations of a spy organisation—or for some mistake by the railway authorities.

The documents related to the secret trials of a new ship's guns and though they were not of very vital moment, their disappearance was regarded as a serious matter.

AT NEWCASTLE.

After several hours of vain searching in the south, the red box, with the documents intact, was found at Newcastle-on-Tyne.

It appears that the box was originally despatched from Newcastle, that the labels upon it became detached, and that a railway official at one of the intervening stations between London and Portsmouth, caused the re-direction of the box to its original starting-point.—Reuter Special.

CHICAGO STRIKE

SITUATION GROWS MORE SERIOUS

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received August 4, 8.41 a.m.)

Chicago, Aug. 3.

The strike at the Union Stockyards has suddenly taken a more serious turn, following the decision of the Livestock Exchange to resume trading.

Over four hundred Commission House employees have now struck work in sympathy with the stockyard men, declaring that they do not want to touch meat that has been handled by strike-breakers.

In addition, several thousand packing house butchers and handlers are threatening to join the strike.

The Commission Houses have resumed trading in spite of the development.

Over a hundred policemen are now on special duty guarding the cattle pens in the Union stockyards.—United Press.

Five Dollars For A Signature

PRICE ON OFFICIAL PENMANSHIP

By an amending Ordinance it is intended to add the Head of the Sanitary Department to the list of officials for whose signature a fee is charged. The fee will be $5.

It is explained that the purpose of the proposed amendment is not so much to obtain extra revenue as to discourage the frequent applications which are made to the Head of the Sanitary Department on no very adequate grounds for, e.g., the change of the name of a holder of a market lease or licence.

H.M.S. WITCH REPORTS

The threat of a Communist invasion of Foochow is believed to have been removed.

According to latest information, the Reds are not in sufficient numbers to make their thrust to the coast effective, although H.M.S. Witch has sent a wireless message stating that they are still in possession of Shuikow, only fifty miles up the Min River from Foochow.

No immediate danger to Foochow is however apparent, in view of the arrival of strong Government reinforcements who have taken up defensive positions in the vicinity of the capital. The Witch and Japanese cruiser, Kuma, are on the scene and the Sacramento is due to-day, to watch foreign interests should any emergency arise.

AMERICAN REPORT.

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received August 4, 1.55 a.m.)

Washington, Aug. 3. The State Department announces that the American Consul at Foochow, Mr. Gordon L. Burke, has reported that between one thousand and two thousand Communists appear to have reached the Min River.

Foochow, at present, he said, is not believed to be in any danger. It is reported also that the Reds have surrounded Yuki and cut the telegraph.—United Press.

Yuki is a long way from Foochow (about ninety miles) and is on the Tashi River, a tributary of the Min, about forty miles from the confluence.

GOVERNMENT REINFORCED.

Foochow, Aug. 4. Large Government reinforcements have arrived here to strengthen the defence position against any invasion by the "Reds."

There are already 2,000 Government troops entrenched in the suburban areas, reinforced by Chinese marines from the three gunboats in the harbour.

According to a detailed account of recent Communist activities, about 4,000 "Reds" commenced an advance toward Shuikow on Wednesday but on Thursday their rear was menaced by Government troops, who formed a strong line extending from Yung-An to Chien-Ow.

An isolated body of "Red" invaders has been practically surrounded by Government troops at Minching, some distance from Foochow.—Central News.

PERRY'S FILM STAR ROMANCE

ARMED GANG BESIEGES HOUSE AT POKFULAM

MYSTERY RAID AT 1.20 A.M.

TENANT STRUCK BY BULLET

CROWBAR ATTACK ON WINDOWS

The Dairy Farm at Pokfulam was the scene of a remarkable affair early this morning, when about 1.20 o'clock, an attempt was made by armed men to break into a building occupied by the cattle fodder contractor, Chong Tam-yan, and his family, for the alleged purpose of committing a robbery.

The assailants did not succeed in their object, leaving after assistance was summoned, but the contractor was injured through being struck in one finger by a bullet from a revolver.

Some twenty men are said to have been concerned in the incident, which for some time partook of the nature of a siege as they surrounded the house and subjected it to a hail of missiles, the door and windows being battered in an attempt to force an entry.

ALARM RAISED.

Roused from sleep by the pandemonium, the contractor soon took stock of his perilous situation, and decided to hold out while waiting for reinforcements. So whilst his wife and daughter blew a steady chorus on their police whistles, and his 14-year-old son braced himself manfully against the door to resist the pressure from without, he himself, at the risk of being struck by a missile, went over to the three windows which were receiving attention from men armed with crowbars.

As he attempted to close a shutter, he was fired at with a revolver, but it must have been an old weapon, for after striking his stomach and leaving only the impress of a bruise, the bullet deflected and struck the middle finger of his left hand.

A MYSTERY.

The attack lasted for a very brief space of time, and ceased as suddenly as it began. When folks of the contractor arrived at the house, they found the assailants nowhere in sight.

Police officers from the West Point Police Station, on the matter being reported to them, began an investigation with results which have convinced them that the affair is in some way connected with the business of the contractor.

Whilst the contractor appears reluctant to give any precise information on this point, and professes not to know any of the assailants, it is recalled that he took over his present contract only fairly recently, and that there has since been a change of folks, some 80 of the old hands having been dismissed at the beginning of this month and their places filled presumably by workers of his own choice.

HITLER FOR PRESIDENT

A POPULARITY CAMPAIGN

DR. GOEBBELS ACTIVE

Berlin, Aug. 3.

A popularity campaign on behalf of Herr Hitler is now being organised by Dr. Joseph Goebbels, the most expert propagandist in the National Socialist Party.

Between now and August 19, when the plebiscite is to be held, over forty million voters must be induced to answer "Yes" to his stepping into the Presidency.

Dr. Goebbels' arrangements are so thorough that the poll is expected to be nearly one hundred per cent. complete.

The name of every voter on the list will be checked off when he records his votes, so that every man and woman in official or private employment, and every tradesman, is bound to vote in order not to run the risk of losing his or her job, or of being boycotted.

Germans abroad are also entitled to vote, including sailors at sea. Even the labour camps and the concentration camps are not being forgotten.—Reuter.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

When Flowers Go to Your Head

SPRIGS FOR COIFFURES DEPEND ON YOUR TYPE

Two fresh gardenias, tucked into the curve where a wave slants backward, transform a simple daytime coiffure into a more glamorous one for evening.

By Alicia Hart

Moonlight... soft breezes drifting through the windows of the dance pavilion or roof garden... exquisitely gowned ladies with flowers in their hair—that's the summer picture. Well, nature will take care of the breezes and the moonlight, couturiers will dictate the correct fashions for the picture and we'll decide on flowers to be tucked into flattering coiffures.

Choosing flowers to wear in your hair must depend on your own particular type. A white orchid would look incongruous in the smooth, tailored hair-dress of a dark sportswoman who goes in for sheathlike evening gowns without frills or pleats. But one lovely orchid would be charming on a little blond head or even a dark one if the waves are loose and feminine. Besides, orchids last longer than any other flower.

Gardenias and camellias are for tall, sophisticated girls and dainty little nosegays of sweet peas and lilies-of-the-valley are becoming to soft feminine types. If you have a certain dashing look about you, consider red, white and blue anemones to wear in your hair. But be sure to arrange them artistically.

Some women tuck fresh flowers behind one ear, others arrange them across the bun in the back but the majority like to wear a blossom or two near the face in the curve where a wave slants backward.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

Select Perfumes to Suit Type

By Alicia Hart

Perfume lovers are divided into two schools of thought this summer. The first insists that single flower odours, smelling like the fresh blossoms after which they are named, are best. The second declares that bouquet fragrances—polite mixtures of a variety of odours—are ideal. As far as perfume fashions go, either is correct. It's up to the individual to make the decision.

Newest among the single flower odours is a wild rose perfume that smells like a bank of June roses on a hillside. It's of a rather heavy consistency, containing an oil instead of an alcohol base, and does not evaporate readily. As a matter of fact, a few drops on a handkerchief in the morning will suffice for the entire day. It's quite expensive, as are all really good perfumes, but a little goes a long way.

If you're the typical outdoor type, try a spicy perfume that is recommended for sportswomen, but if you're the Dresden China sort of girl, stick to sweet floral odours. Fresh, clean-smelling perfumes appeal to those who use cosmetics sparingly and go in for that "scrubbed-looking" type of beauty.

Apply Perfumes With Intelligence

By Alicia Hart

How you apply it is just as important as what odours and what brand of perfume you use. I know a woman who can afford to buy—and does—expensive odours in large quantities, but, sad to relate, she pours it on her clothes instead of spraying it on her skin and the scent, too strong for the first few hours, disappears entirely before the evening is over.

Then there is another girl who can afford only a small amount of good perfume now and then. But this wise little thing sprays it on her neck and shoulders before she puts on her clean underthings, with the result that the odour lingers until she bathes again. Of course, she puts a drop on her handkerchief, too. Every-one should. And she uses toilet water and soap that harmonizes with the perfume, thereby creating no disharmony of scents.

Remember that it's better to go unperfumed than to use an evening odour for daytime, spray scent on frocks instead of directly on the skin, or use so much that you leave a heavy trail behind when you walk across the dance floor. In short, perfume, like most cosmetic preparations, requires intelligent application.

Summer Salads

May Be Light Or Hearty

By Mary E. Dague

Salad meals are the order of summer days because they may be at the same time hearty and light.

The combination of meat and vegetables in hearty salads is fine for summer because it helps to effect a balanced diet. Fruits also may be combined with meats or fish with good results. The vegetable or fruit acts as a filler for the salad and supplies mineral content and ballast in the diet.

The following salad can be varied in several ways, as for instance. Neat cubes of veal and matchlike pieces of carrots substituted for the beans and tongue.

Summer Salad

One and one-half cups cold cooked beans, 1 cup cold cooked ham, 1 cup cold cooked tongue, Bermuda onion, green pepper.

Cut ham and tongue in pieces the same size as the beans. Mix and add 2 tablespoons vinegar or lemon juice and 4 tablespoons salad oil beaten with 1-2 teaspoon salt and 1-8 teaspoon pepper. Cover and let stand on ice for an hour or longer. When ready to serve drain from dressing. Wash pepper and cut in rings, removing seeds and white pith. Peel onion and cut in slices. Let stand in iced salt water for ten minutes. Drain and separate into rings. File alternating slices of onion and green pepper one above another on a leaf of lettuce. Fill this little pepper and onion cup with the salad mixture and mask with mayonnaise.

Liver and Cabbage Salad

Liver and cabbage salad is unusual and delicious. You will need one cup diced cooked liver, 2 tablespoons minced cooked bacon, 1 cup diced celery, 2 cups shredded crisp cabbage, French dressing, mayonnaise, curly endive.

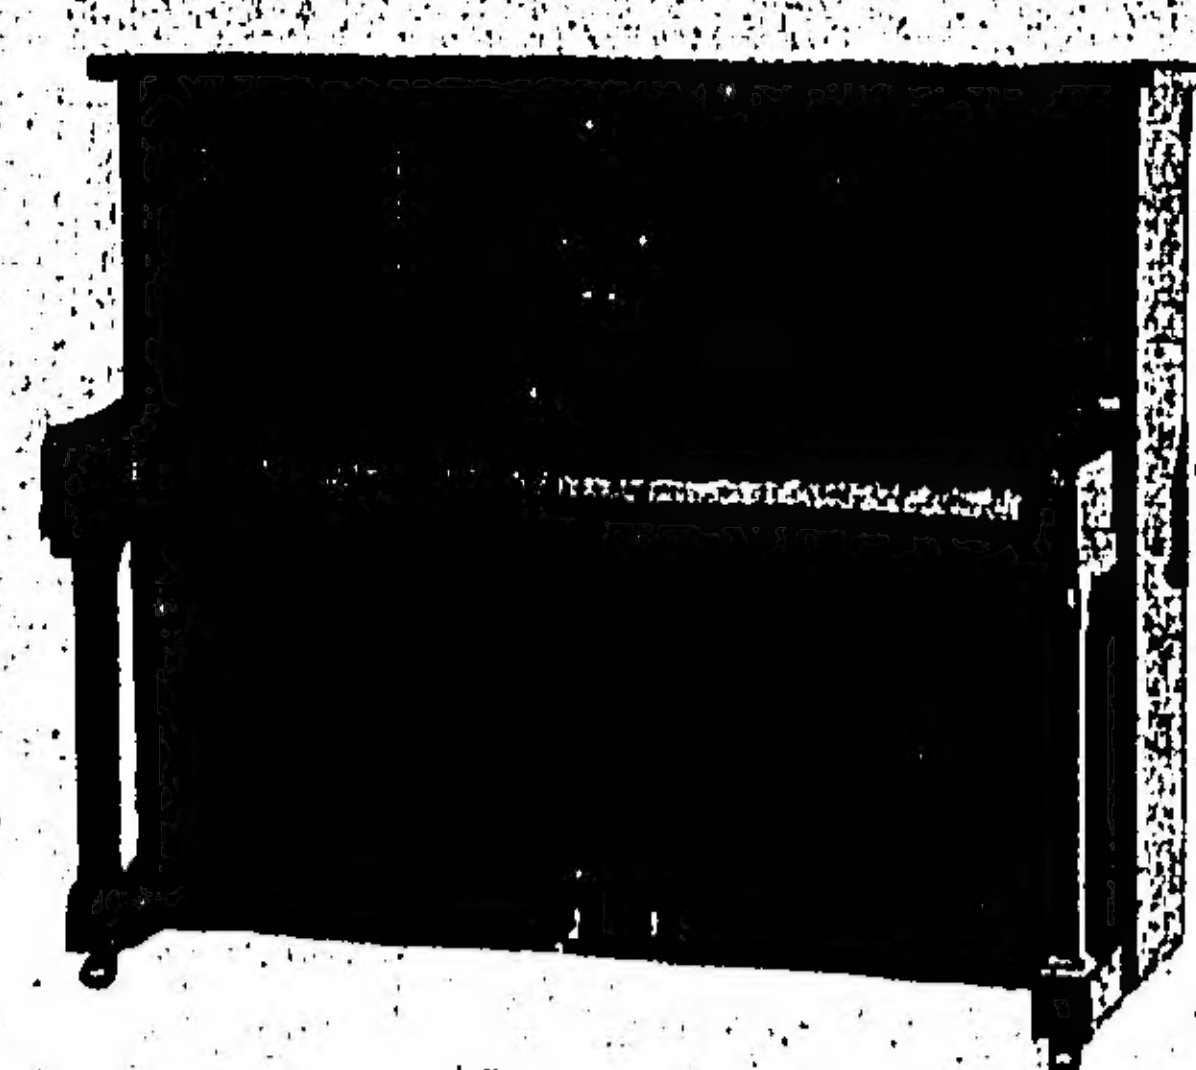

Marinate liver and bacon in French dressing for one hour. A few drops of onion juice may be added to the dressing if wanted. Add celery and cabbage and mix lightly. Serve on a bed of curly endive and top with mayonnaise.

Sweetbread Salad

Sweetbread salad can take the place of chicken salad for party affairs and is easier and quicker to prepare unless you use canned chicken. The sweetbreads are soaked in cold salted water for one hour, simmered in salted acidulated water for twenty minutes and then blanched in cold water. Remove all membrane and connecting tissue and cut in neat dice.

Two cups prepared sweetbreads, 2 cups shredded celery, 1-2 cup blanched and coarsely shredded almonds, 1 cup peeled and seeded white grapes, French dressing, mayonnaise, lettuce hearts.

Marinate sweetbreads in French dressing made with a combination of lemon juice and tarragon vinegar. Let stand on ice one hour or longer. When ready to serve drain from dressing and combine with prepared materials. Add mayonnaise to make moist and serve in nests of lettuce hearts. Garnish with thin slices of pimento-stuffed olives.

SOPHIE KERR'S LATEST SUCCESS IN ROMANTIC PROBLEM FICTION "STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

JANE THORPE came to New York determined to show her home town and especially AMY JACKSON that she can make a success of her life. Amy had been her best friend until HOWARD JACKSON broke the engagement. Jane forced on him and married Amy. Unable to bear the sight of Amy's happiness, Jane obtained a job in a New York real estate office.

Jane is clever and soon is making an excellent salary. She has to deal with ROGER THORPE, who is married. Later she finds out that when he offers to bear the expense of their child she dismisses him contemptuously.

In her desperate plight Jane turns to Amy for help. Howard is touring Germany and Amy comes to New York. She stays until the baby is born and then, horrified because Jane insists on giving her daughter away, agrees to take the child with the understanding that Jane never shall reclaim her.

Back in Marburg Amy worries over what Howard will think of her taking the baby. A month passes and then one morning the telephone rings and she hears his voice.

CHAPTER XX

Over the telephone Howard explained it all to Amy. He and Professor Ellert had suddenly managed to get passage on a freighter—slow and small and primitive, without a wireless. They had just landed and he had need to the nearest telephone. Yes, he had sent her a cable when they left but had had to entrust it to a stupid chap. Probably he'd pocketed the money and thrown the message away. They were both well and he was going to grab old Professor Ellert and dash to the station for the next train.

"But I had to hear your voice, Amy—I couldn't wait. I'll send a wire if there's time but I had to speak to you first." And then again "Darling—darling!"

After she had put down the telephone she remembered that he didn't yet know about the baby. Not that it mattered. He was back, he was safe. In another day he would be with her! Nothing, nothing else mattered beyond that blessed knowledge and expectation.

How she ever got through the interval she could not tell. She telephoned and was telephoned to, though she hardly knew what she was saying. She cleaned and polished and arranged and re-arranged the house. She cranked her refrigerator and pantry with every article for which Howard had ever shown the slightest preference. She played loud triumphant music—the A Flat Polonaise, the Rakoczy March and the hilarious "Alexander's Ragtime Band"—but every moment was an age and she turned constantly to watch the clock. A telegram came, telling the train, the hour of his arrival, and at last time reluctantly dragged itself to the fulfilment of the promise.

He was there, actually, brown and hard and strong. His arms were like bands of steel around her, worked as an able seaman on that damned boat," he said. "It would have been fun if I hadn't been so anxious to get back to you. I'll never let you out of my sight again."

His clothes were torn, wrinkled and water-soaked. "I had nothing to change into. We lost our baggage in Germany, or had it pilched. Old Ellert mourned his night-shirts every hour of the way back! It was a whole of an adventure, the whole thing, and I'm glad I saw it and glad I'm out of it. I've got a billion things to tell you. But first I want to hear what you've been up to."

She blurted it out: "I've adopted a baby. A little girl!"

He laughed aloud: "Amy—I don't believe you!"

"But I have. It's the truth. Come along and look at her."

He followed, holding her arm tight, still laughing, but at the sight of the cradle and the sleeping child he stopped amazed. "Well, I'm a son of a gun! It is the truth. A little girl? What's her name?"

"She hasn't any yet. I waited for you to choose one."

"Good, we'll call her Axeline after the wife of the captain of the ship. She was a grand old Norwegian dame six feet two, voice like a fog-horn, hard enough to be in the Ellert Museum, bossed the whole works."

She watched him for some sign of disapproval. "You don't mind, Howard? You're sure you don't mind?"

But he only took her again in his arms. "Amy, sweet, anything in this world you want to do is right with me."

Jane read the letter from Miss Rosa with a frown. It was plaintive, querulous, quite unlike Miss Rosa's usual robust communications. She didn't feel well. She was tired all the time. She didn't sleep more than two hours a night. This war over in Europe was very upsetting and now it looked as though America would have to join in and a fine mess that would be! Her affairs were in bad order, too, and she didn't trust the advice of this new young partner Mr. Massey had taken in, one of the Trainors and the Trainors were trash through and through. She wished to goodness Jane would come and help her decide what to do. She didn't want to end her days in the poorhouse, but she felt she was surely headed toward it.

Jane put the letter down on her desk and considered. It was almost four years since she had been to Marburg. Her last visit there was when she had managed to get her inheritance out of Miss Rosa's and old Mr. Massey's hands.

"The old chap was gaga then," she thought, "and if he's taken in a smart young hick there's no telling what could happen to Aunt Rosa's money. That money ought to come to me some day. I wish I had some of it now for this Sears sale. It would be handy. I suppose I'll have to go and look into it."

Her little office was a neat and pleasant place even on this cloudy March morning. There was nothing feminine about it except Jane herself, slender and smart in her dress of fine dark serge with thin white ruffles across the neck and around her wrists. The clear contrast suited her. Her sense of drama was gratified by good clothes and good grooming. She was the successful young business woman, setting and costume complete. But the plain polished walnut, the easement cloth curtains, the dark rugs, the call-tutor, telephone, letter baskets—these might just as well have belonged to a successful young business man. It was perhaps an unconscious tribute to the rebellion of Ann Veronica against a man-made world—though Jane did not read Ann Veronica now—which kept Jane's office like a man's. Also it made her clients a little more easy in their minds about doing business with so young a woman.

After the Thorpe episode was completely over and Amy had taken the child, Jane had started out for herself, a perilous proceeding for one with only a small circle of friends and acquaintances. Since the real estate business counts so surely on such contacts. Yet Jane had done fairly well. Now and then she acted confidentially for Kandel's, and Mr. Kandel had urged her to come back to his office, but she would not do that.

Gradually and persistently she had worked up a definite line for herself among the small landlords and her progress had been steady, her profits slight, but sure. It had meant week after week, month after month of hard grind 10, 12, 14 hours a day. Not that Jane objected to the grind. She wanted to be so tired at night that she would neither think nor remember. She welcomed anodyne for her foolish surrender to Roger Thorpe, humiliation and anger for having, as she saw it, abused herself to Amy, permitted Amy to insult her.

Amy had told her to stay out of her life, never to try to take the child. Jane hated the recollection of it, the submission to Amy. She should have been as bitter with Amy as Amy had been with her. As for staying out of Amy's life—why, it was Amy who had better stay out of hers, Jane—hadn't she begun by taking Howard Jackson away from her? And now, her child?

Time had blurred and faded these resentments, pushed them into the background. Jane's assurance had returned with her established business, her growing bank account and her own private discretion. She had taken another apartment—with elevators and an alert hall force. She asked some of her best clients to dinner now and then and was asked by them in return. She went to the theatre and to an occasional concert or art show with a woman friend, Miss Jardine perhaps, or some other chosen for polite reasons, but her work was her first interest and nothing pushed it aside.

Sometimes all that nonsense about Roger Thorpe, and the child, and even Amy, took on a quality of unreality. Such things surely could never have happened to this brisk resourceful creature who lived so sensibly, so openly, with no hint of romantic adventure.

Nevertheless, Jane had not gone back to Marburg. There was no reason why she should. Miss Rosa and she were better friends at a distance, and this was the first time Rosa had ever sounded a note of distrust. Knowing her aunt's disposition and mental perturbations, Jane knew there was something serious behind the present appeal. Miss Rosa was not one to make a fuss about nothing. "She's not really old," thought Jane. "She never tells her age, but she can't be more than 61 or 62. So she surely must be sick. And this Massey partner must have bothered her more than she says. I shall have to look into that."

THE INFLUENCE OF MORRISON

It is said that a prominent Chinese official, asked to what he would trace back the Revolution and the expulsion of the Manchus, replied that the day when Robert Morrison landed at Canton was the beginning of it. Yet Morrison was one of the most pacific of men, and at his death he seemed to have made little or no impression on the great Empire to which he was commissioned. When he served with Lord Amherst's Mission to Peking and had his share in its ignominious failure, how preposterous it would have seemed if someone had told him then that he would one day be spoken of as the man who had brought to the dust that proud Imperial Court! What, after all, was the revolutionary thing that he did? He gave to China the Bible in its own language. True, the gift at the time did not seem to be charged with any political dynamite. It was published at a distance from China, and in 21 volumes, so that it was a library rather than a book. Of course, many of the books were circulated separately, but their style smacked too much of the foreigner to commend them to educated Chinese.

It was prohibited literature, too; but the Manchus were to find what others have found, that to put the Bible under the ban is only to raise up enemies to oneself. The struggle for religious liberty began, and was bound to lead before long to the struggle for civil liberty. Parts of Morrison's translation fell, a year before his death, into the hands of a young Cantonese scholar for whom the examinations always proved too much; very partially understood and very seriously distorted, it played its part in the Taiping Rebellion. Of even greater significance in the end was an incident which took place in the streets of Hongkong. A young samurai, seeking in the United States the forbidden fruit of knowledge, landed here in 1864 from an American schooner, and exchanged one of his two swords for a Chinese New Testament. When Neeshima went back years later to Japan, it was to found Doshisha University in Kyoto. Just because the enterprise which began with Morrison made a book central and urged

NOTES OF THE DAY

HINDENBURG

The whole world unites in sympathy with the German nation in the loss it has suffered by the death of its aged President, who is universally acknowledged to have been one of the great world figures of his time. He was the personal embodiment of the spirit of German patriotism. Loyal to the Empire, and then to the Republic, he served the true interests of his country by sinking all personal feelings and by placing the Fatherland before all other considerations. After an active Army career, he left military service five years before the Great War broke out, retiring into what he had thought would be a quiet, private life. But he was soon called on to play a big part in the biggest clash of armies the world had ever known, and after the Battle of Tannenberg became a national hero, worshipped by sixty million Germans as "Our Hindenburg." When the final collapse came and the beaten German Army flooded back, Hindenburg, unlike Ludendorff and others, took the lead and tried, with considerable success, to create order from chaos. Only when the Army was safely at home did he again retire to Hanover, deeply puzzled by events. But never, by one word, did he attack the new order of things, confining his criticism by staying aloof for seven eventful years.

THE CALL OF PATRIOTISM

When, after the death of President Ebert, the idea of nominating von Hindenburg for the Presidency was first mooted and his friends approached the old soldier, he declined almost gruffly. In the end, however, the continuous appeal to his patriotism, backed by a flood of messages of encouragement from all parts of the country, prevailed, and he consented to the nomination, leading to the defeat of the Republican candidate by nearly a million votes. The remainder of Hindenburg's life story is recent history. He filled the high office of President with the same dignity, conscientiousness and application to detail that had distinguished him as a soldier. Only occasionally the training and tradition of a life-time broke through the rigid if purely autocratic loyalty to the new order. But although he strove manfully, he could never really reconcile himself to post-war Germany. His heart died with the collapse of the Imperial Army. But for his sincerity and his rugged honesty he is to-day mourned by friend and erstwhile foe alike.

MINNEAPOLIS

All sorts of rather absurd allegations of Moscow-financed intrigue have been made in connection with the labour troubles in the United States, American publicists having chosen to slip into the lazy inaccuracy of assuming that all Communism must automatically derive from Russia. The troubles at Minneapolis suggest that the United States would be well advised in seeking enlightenment on the growing radicalism to give a closer study to events nearer home. For it is difficult to imagine a more certain method of breeding Communism than the strike-breaking campaign ordered by Governor Olson. Were the lorry-drivers responsible for the continuation of the strike, the men would have no real grievance. Obviously, a small group of dissatisfied workers could not be permitted to paralyse an entire city indefinitely. But, the circumstances at Minneapolis are very much different—the Governor has stepped in to smash an industrial dispute which was converted virtually from a strike into a lock-out when the employers refused to accept the award of a Federal Arbitration Board. Victims of the Governor's move are the workers, who are deprived of their only defensive weapon. The employers, instead of being penalised for refusing to accept the Federal peace plan, are enabled to operate for profit with black-leg labour guarded by State troops. The Soviet does not need gold to turn workers into communists while this sort of thing goes on.

the reading of it, it had to build schools, and education is a force for social change which is not easily to be turned aside. Had Morrison never come to Canton, had the Bible never been translated, the West would have continued to break in upon the East and China would sooner or later have been opened to foreign trade. What he did was to introduce an idea of human worth and liberty which is still working, and which will continue to do so till China's readjustment is complete.

MR. PEPYS IN HONGKONG

July 27th.—Up betimes and to my office, where I find a great press of business and am disconsolate for it. Afterwards I do come to a preview of a picture and sit pretty late for it, and find more to be done upon Saturday, as I am not minded to stay long after seven of the clock. So to the Clubbe where, upon the Verandah, I do fall into talk with some gentlemen, who tell me that the custody of dogs is far better ordered now, tho' Mr. Povy says he still maintains that no dog should go upon a bathing beach where children play, at any rate, their habits being different from those of human beings. There is some talk of Italy's actions on the frontier, and I do trust that she interferences not in Austria. For once a nation starts mungling in the affairs of other, there seems to be great danger of friction and other nations being drawn in, which may God defend. And in some measure I am against our politicians that they do seek an arms embargo in the matter of the Gran Chaco War. For I do verily believe that in the end they will lay an embargo on our own traders and on nobody else, which will drive yet more profits into foreign hands, while the war goes unabated.

28th.—This day begins fair, but is soon clouded over and the rain starts to fall, to my greatest possible discontent, and when we shall make an end of these matches at Bowles I know not. To a preview of pictures and so many there are I come not to my nunccheon until three o'clock. But, as it rains so hard, it makes but little difference. Later to the footebry to dine, and I did dance a little, though my not being in evening garments did trouble my partner a little. But if I may not dance save I do on my garments of formality and above all, a starched collar, I will not go at all, save when the occasion be a formal gathering.

29th. (Lord's Day).—This day early I am awakened by rain and I do find to my greatest possible discontent that I am taken with a rheume in the head. And so, being greatly pressed by business at my office, and fearing to be laid up, I do, as I abed this day—and lost little thereby, it being as wet and foule a day as ever I knew. Later I do rise and take a little dinner in the Clubbe but my rheume is heavy upon me and so to bed.

30th.—This day I lay late but perforce I must needs go to my office after nunccheon and there dispatch my business, and after to a meeting of the Dramatic Clubbe, where I find very few are come to hear the statement, which, as I think, is a very satisfactory one. And I am in hope that the coming season shall be a good one, if only the public attendance were more spread, for at present they do seem to come only upon the last two nights. And this, as I suppose, is based upon the fallacy that the play and the players are not upon terms until late in the production, which indeed I can guarantee not to be true. But upon considering the case of a production in the old days, when the Theatre Royal was at the Society's service, with its full-sized stage and all outside service, and comparing thereto the difficulty in the very small, albeit very excellent—theatre in which they now do work, I am amazed either that the A.D.C. did not do more in the old days, or else that they do so much now. For it is their intent to produce three plays in this coming season and, if it may be, they are minded to change the players each time. Which indeed is an enterprise that doth deserve encouragement, as I do see it. But I am sad at heart to reflect that until the new public Theatre be built, it proves most unlikely that there shall be a large production, such as Kismet or St. Joan, which have been played in the past.

31st.—The weather is still most foule, though later this day it clears but a little. Reading, in the news sheets, I do approve our policy at home, in that Mr. F. Perry plays not in the doubles, and though we do lose that match, we be two up, and Perry and Austin rested for the two more singles. Business being done at my Office, to Kowloon, where I attend the Hockey meeting, and this, as I do suppose, goes as smoothly as any has done these many years. Yet I am persuaded there is a sad lack of grounds for the game. Dined, for the last time, at Seventh Heaven, and so to bed.

1st. August.—Still wet. But the gloom is raised somewhat in that England doth win the Davis Cup by four matches to one, and so, after many years do come to our own again seeing that both Wimbledon champions be British. And, as an omen, I do wonder if it be a sign that Mr. Sopwith shall win the America's Cup. But I cannot believe it, especially as I do call to mind that the President hath called the whole of his Pacific Fleet to the Atlantic seaboard at this time.

2nd.—Reading in the news sheets I do find a verbosa et grandis epistola from His Lordship the Bishop, and I do perceive that I must in future read the Commandment "Thou shalt do no murder. But, if thou dost, thou shalt in no way be put to death for it." I do find the sentence: "I am convinced that thought of penalty never deters a murderer. Therefore..." To the thinking man, of course, the question of deterrence is of vital importance. But My Lord waves it aside on the strength of his personal opinion. He doth not quote statistics from countries which have abolished the death penalty, but, it may be, this is because they do not bear the case out. If they do, I doubt not his Lordship's case will be much strengthened, and I shall be mightily pleased to peruse them. But if His Lordship doth make the point that some from personal or religious interest do not hang when they should, then I am heartily at one with him when he says this should not be. To my office and later to the Clubbe where is some talk of the Morrison Centenary. And I am mighty astonished to learn that Robert Morrison did never land upon the island of Hongkong, though when I do compare the dates I see that it must be so. Very late, writing in my chamber, and as it begins to blow heavily about two of the clock, I do close my windows upon the south. And so to bed.

Be Colorful in NEW SPORT CLOTHES

THIS HAND-KNITTED sports frock has a medium blue skirt and a matching sweater with blue background and all-over design in white angora yarn.

Costumes Courtesy
PECK and PECK
New York.

THIS FLATTERING summer sports ensemble consists of a skirt and box jacket in green and black plaid woolen with a plain green polo type shirt to match.

HERE'S a swaggy coat of soft white yarn, worn over a two-piece sports dress in red, yellow, green and brown stripes.

PERFECT FOR GOLF is this two-piece sports dress of knitted string in natural color.

THE SPECTATOR sports outfit below, consisting of skirt, blouse and open-down-the-front sweater, is grand for mature figures as well as for younger girls.

Whether you play or just sit and watch, you'll be delighted with the vivid designs now being offered

FOR active and spectator sports, smart women are choosing gay colours in striped and checked designs. The greens are as vivid and beautiful as the grass on the golf course, and the tawny orange and yellowish shades are as brilliant and all eye-filling as the streaks in a summer sunset.

Gone are the days when a lady played golf or watched a tennis tournament in a pale pastel frock. This summer's sports-women wear colours that make Barnum's opening parade seem pale by contrast.

Don't miss the bright blues. They're particularly flattering to brunettes, and the slightly lighter and softer tones are nice on blondes too. Of course, if you prefer something neutral, look at the golf and hiking outfits in off-white knitted string.

Speaking of knitted string, it's being used in profusion both for one-piece and two-piece frocks. It's washable and lends itself admirably to any type of sports outfit to be worn almost anywhere.

Sports clothes are designed from a practical standpoint. Skirts are made with pleats in the right places; polo-type shirts have slide fastenings; sleeves are cut full around the armholes so that they won't split in the seams when you lift an arm to swing a racket or golf club.

Spectator sports clothes are more elaborate than formerly.

The spectator sports frock has been glorified this year. Designed originally for wear while watching others play, it has become institutional and goes shopping, to luncheon, and almost any other place where more formal dress isn't required. Young girls practically live in spectator sports clothes and matrons now are becoming greatly interested.

For instance, a woman with a mature figure knows that a skirt and open-down-the-front sweater ensemble is a practical investment. It's perfect for motoring as well as for town. Practical, yet the last word in style and beauty.

INTERVIEW WITH THE "DAUPHIN"

EXPECTING ROYALIST TRIUMPH

BY MORRIS GILBERT

Rudyard Kipling wrote a story called "The Man Who Would be King." Here is a story of a man who may be king—provided that will-power, training and forces of the times in France work for him.

He is the Count of Paris, 25 years old, direct descendant of Hugh Capet who ruled France almost 1,000 years ago; of Saint-Louis; of Henry IV, "le Vert Galant"; of Louis Philippe; scion of the most famous royal house in Europe, the House of Bourbon.

The Count of Paris "will" reign after his father, of course. For the Count is Dauphin. It is his father, the Duc de Guise, who would rule as Jean III if France should turn again to monarchy.

Asked how soon he thought this would happen, the Count of Paris answered: "Very soon. If you could estimate the quantity and quality of evidence which my father and I receive of how weary France is of the present regime, you would be astonished."

Pressed to mention his idea of a definite period still to pass before the change might take place, the Count firmly answered, "A maximum of five or six years."

DEMOCRATIC PRINCE.

The Count of Paris received this correspondent in his study at the Manor of Anjou as a guest. There was no formality. When the visitor forgot to address his host as "Monseigneur" it didn't seem to make any difference. Only once was there direct indication that protocol existed. That was when the talk finished, the Count stopped through the doorway of his study first. But in the hall, outside, he dropped back casually on even terms with his visitor.

The Manor of Anjou is a five-mile ride from the centre of Brussels. The estate, leafy and charming, is surrounded by a brick wall. The Count's study is a plain room, simply furnished. One wall is filled with maps of France on rollers. The Count came rapidly into the room, shook hands firmly and cheerfully, and said: "Isn't it cold? Would you like whisky, port, or sherry?" He spoke a precise and fluent English.

The Count is built like an athlete, broad of shoulder, narrow of waist. His wrists are powerful and his hands big and capable. They are the hands of a man of action who, unless otherwise occupied, would be an excellent mechanic. In fact, he is one, and an aviator, carrying a French pilot's licence. He rides, plays tennis, and swims.

Students of French history say the Count of Paris recalls his Capetian ancestors in appearance, which is striking. His forehead is wide, his cheekbones high, nose straight and fine. He has extraordinary eyes. They are long and almond-shaped, fringed with heavy lashes, deeply blue, friendly, and keen.

FRENCH DELEGATIONS.

The Count sat down and began describing in detail the tragic 6th of February in the Place de la Concorde in Paris. He told what was done and what was not done, and how, and why. "You talk English," he said, "and I talk French. We can keep our ideas clearer that way."

He analyzed the political situation in France, as it concerns his father's chances of entering Paris some day as Jean III. He referred to his father as "papa." News from "home" reaches the Manor often, and nowadays it is pretty good news for the dwellers there, unless they are badly deceived. Centres of royalism in France are working among the labouring classes, not merely the nobility.

"The people I'm most interested in," said the Count, "are workers, men who are accomplishing something, forging ahead, thinking in terms of to-day and to-morrow, men who are working with their hands and their brains. We see a great many here. Every Sunday, delegations arrive from France to visit us. They come unsolicited, and they pay their own way. There have been groups that journeyed all the way from southern France, spent two nights in trains, a few hours with us, and went home again. Miners from northern France come up too, and factory workers. We had a group of school teachers here not long ago."

BEARING THE PRETENDER TO FRANCE'S THRONE.

Little Prince Henri, held in the arms of his father, the Count of Paris, takes a healthy tug at the goatee of the Duc de Guise, pretender to the throne of France.

Other visitors are industrialists and business men, anxious to learn the royalist way out of the dilemma which—according to the royalist doctrine—the present regime has posed for France.

It happens that the Count's mind is turning toward the corporative type of government with much curiosity. The corporative programme of Fascist Italy interests him greatly. Theorists of the royalist movement in France in fact claim the corporative idea as monarchic in origin, having been in practice in France before being overthrown by the Revolution.

EXILED BY OLD LAW.

The Duc de Guise and the Count of Paris having accepted their full obligations as claimants of the throne are automatically exiled by a law of the Republic, passed in 1886. Should they renounce these claims they could live in Paris, or anywhere else they chose in their native land. The Count of Paris could fly over France and land at any airport he pleased—instead of skirting the frontier as he recently did on a flight to Switzerland from Belgium.

Instead of which, in the Manor of Anjou the ancient motto of the royal house of France is cut boldly into the stone of the great fireplace—"MONT JOIE—SANT-DENIS." At the entrance gates of the estate, the royal fleur-de-lys is worked in metal into the lamps, and the lamps themselves are topped with crowns.

And over the highest tower of the manor a flag gallantly floats. But it should be noted that the flag is not the white "oriflamme" of the old French royalty. It is the tricolour!

Peace Pact Revision Urged by Lord Ponsonby: Or New World Smash-Up

BY WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS

Revision of the so-called peace treaties and teeth in the peace pacts, Lord Ponsonby told me in his chambers at the House of Peers, are imperative to prevent a new world smash-up.

Japan, he said, could have been stopped in her tracks in Manchuria had moral or economic sanctions been applied, and disarmament would not have failed had Great Britain and some of the other powers gone about it more vigorously.

As it is, the world to-day faces an extremely grave situation, both in Europe and the Far East. Unless it acts promptly to check events already in motion in both theatres, we may expect a crash.

Lord Ponsonby was Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in Mr. MacDonald's first Labour cabinet, and he was Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in the second. He is now an active member of the House of Lords.

"We simply must not allow the armaments race to go on," he said. "We've got to make another try and from the opposite direction. We must try to get at the causes of war and, by remedying them, achieve disarmament."

REVISE TREATIES.

"This, of course, means treaty revision. I am aware of that. But as the treaties are bound to be revised anyway, sooner or later, in one way or another, the sooner we begin, the better."

"I am not advocating another world conference, however. Such conferences seldom get anywhere. Delegates play too much to the galleries. Perhaps we might approach the causes of war through a commission of the League."

"Anyway, nations should be asked to state quite frankly what they want. Let them put it down on paper. If they want more territory, let them say so frankly. Let's try to find out what makes them dissatisfied.

Lord Ponsonby... sees world catastrophe if peace pacts are not revised.

"Maybe this approach to disarmament would not succeed any better than the other. But it would gain time. It would give the world time to 'cool off.'"

"At any rate, one thing is certain: The peoples of the world do not want war. Of that I am convinced. None of them want it—not even the Germans. Some of their hot-headed leaders might want it, but the people do not."

"Certainly the people of Great Britain do not want it. There would be hundreds of thousands of war-resisters in this country if war were declared. There would be revolution. How could you fight a war with hundreds of thousands of your people—your young men—in prison?"

Lord Ponsonby vigorously criticizes Sir John Simon's handling not only of the disarmament efforts at Geneva, but Britain's Far Eastern policy as well.

Much of the blame for what is now going on in both spheres he lays at the door of the British Government for its lack of vigour.

Had Britain agreed with the other great powers to withdraw diplomatic representatives from Tokyo and, if that failed, to apply other moral and economic sanctions in his opinion Japan would not have persisted in her Manchurian adventure.

JAPAN ENCOURAGED.

To-day, partly at least as a result of Britain's weak stand, Lord Ponsonby said, Japan apparently has turned her eyes away from Russia—where, for a time, they rested until American recognition scared her off—to concentrate once more on China.

"We should have taken a firmer stand upon Japan's announcement of a Monroe Doctrine for China," he observed. "The British reply gave Japan to understand that no very great concern was felt in this country over her pretensions."

Suddenly the grave look on Lord Ponsonby's face changed to a smile.

"Anyhow," he chuckled, "we ought to do our best for peace. We in this building here (the House of Parliament) and around Whitehall (where most of the government departments are located) would be in the front line trenches in the next war. We might be the ones they aimed at first."

Those who make the wars, or let them come, was his conclusion, as last are on the spot themselves.

Lord Ponsonby made it plain that he was speaking for himself and not for his party.

THE AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHER

NOTES AND QUERIES

Most pictorial photographers realize the importance of paying attention to small details. A difference of a few inches in the position of a camera may result in a picture of impeccable quality or one which indicates evidence of careless selection of viewpoint.

This is one of the cases where the user of the larger camera scores over the worker who uses one of very small size. A note in the composition which detracts from the subject may escape the photographer's notice when the subject is seen in the small viewfinder, but it would at once be seen on the focussing screen of a camera of larger size.

An important point when using a small camera is to watch the subject as well as the image on the finder. It is for this reason that the wire frame or large direct vision-finder is likely to be helpful to the user of the small camera when seeking for pictorial effects and good composition.

QUERIES ANSWERED.

Below are given the first batch of queries forwarded to the Hon. Secretary of the Hongkong International Photographic Club by readers. The letters are somewhat curtailed for obvious reasons, but the chief points have been retained and replied to.

Readers are invited to send in queries, which should be addressed to the Hon. Secretary, Hongkong International Photographic Society, c/o the United National Corporation, Ltd., National Bank Building, third floor.

In the event of queries requiring an explanation of some length, an appointment will be made with the writer and the matter dealt with verbally. Otherwise, all queries will be answered in the Hongkong Telegraph, on Saturdays.

FILTERS.

QUERY.—For general all-round out-of-doors photography, especially cloud renderings and tone graduations, which are to be preferred, green or yellow filters for use with Isochrome and other Chrome films?—C.A.Y. NORONHA.

ANSWER.—In using Isochrome or other "Chrome" films, only under special conditions should a filter be used at all. This is for cutting out mist in distant views, and if you wish for perfect cloud renderings. In ordinary landscape work, the Chrome film registers green and yellows more perfectly without a filter. If a filter must be used, a light yellow filter (x1 or x2) is ample. The green filter should only be used with Pan and Super-Pan films.

DEFINITION.

QUERY.—Does a filter interfere with sharpness of definition in the negative?—SILVER SALTS.

ANSWER.—Yes, sharpness is adversely affected when enlarging to more than five diameters. Therefore, a filter should only be used when absolutely necessary, and then only a truly optical filter of tested glass.

MINIATURE NEGATIVES.

QUERY.—What is the ideal exposure and development time for miniature negatives?—"HYPO".

ANSWER.—Space precludes a detailed reply. Slight over-exposure and under-development gives the ideal negative for enlargement, and is the best precaution against graininess in miniature negatives.

MINIATURE CAMERAS.

QUERY.—I wish to purchase a miniature camera employing 35 mm. film. Which one should I buy?—"OUT PORT".

ANSWER.—We cannot specify any particular make of camera, but we are sure that the different dealers will be pleased to show the various makes available. We also suggest that you attend the talk on miniature photography given under the auspices of the Hongkong International Photographic Society, to be held on Thursday, Aug. 23rd, at 5.45 p.m. by Mr. A. N. Betts.

FRILLING PROBLEM.

QUERY.—There are times when I wish to develop films and find the ice box empty. Although I put up very late at night, even then the water from the taps makes the film run. Sometimes I must develop my own film, as I do not want anybody to see, so I cannot give it to a dealer.—"CROW SUR".

ANSWER.—A teaspoonful of Glauber salts in the developing solution, and hypo will bring down the temperature to a remarkable extent. Formalin or alum hardener will be an added safeguard against frilling and reticulation. It would be much safer, however, to leave the film before dinner and do your developing before the ice box is exhausted.

Entrance forms to the Club may be obtained at the talks from the Hon. Secretary, or at the Show-rooms of Messrs. Schmidt & Co., Gloucester Building.

SPECIAL PLANS PREPARED

NATIONAL PLANNING BOARD

REPORT NEARLY COMPLETED

Washington, Aug. 3.

The National Planning Board is almost ready to submit the draft of the first step in translating President Roosevelt's proposed "greater New Deal" from words to blue-prints.

Little known, but officially recognized as a vital unit of the Recovery Administration, this Board, established last year by the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Harold I. Ickes, has been engaged in research upon which the government may base its future physical, economic, and social policies.

Its work promises to bring a step nearer realization, the president's idea of planned progress for the United States.

The Report will be submitted to the President and Mr. Ickes, jointly.

"When the next Congress convenes, I hope to be able to present to it a carefully considered National Plan, covering the development and the human use of the national resources of land and water over a long period of years," President Roosevelt's "greater New Deal" message said.

The National Planning Board hopes to help make that plan a reality.

STUPENDOUS TASK.

At his desk in the Department of the Interior Building, Mr. Charles W. Eliot explained the stupendous task involved in national planning to the United Press. "The Board," he said, "is engaged in the exploration of what might be done towards a continuing programme to meet the physical, economic, and social requirements of the nation. What are we doing, where are we going, and why?—Those are questions before us."

The three-member Board is engaged in four types of work:

Advice on the Public Works Programme.

Stimulation of State, City, and Regional Planning.

Coordination of Federal Planning activities.

SHAMEEN NOTES

MR. FARMER OFF TO JAPAN

Shameen, Aug. 3. Mr. W. R. Farmer, proprietor of the Victoria Hotel, left this morning by the steamer for a round trip to Japan. Mr. Farmer recently had a bad collapse from the heat and is taking this trip to recuperate. He sails on the Ashimi Maru, leaving Hongkong on Saturday afternoon. The Japanese Consul-General recently transferred from here to Tientsin is also sailing on the same boat.

Mr. W. G. Cameron, manager of the Victoria Hotel, Shameen, and Dr. R. L. Lancaster, the Medical Officer of Health, gave a piano-forte recital at the local Radio Broadcasting Station last night. templating preparation of a "plan for a plan"—or a report on the best organization for continuous planning work.

PLAN FOR A PLAN.

Development of this "plan for a plan" section of the coming report by Mr. Ickes and the President, has been supervised by two research consultants, Dr. Lewis Lorwin, of Brookings Institute, Washington, and Professor A. Forl Hinricks, of Brown University, Rhode Island.

"Their report," said Mr. Eliot, "will stipulate what manner of planning organizations there are now in the Federal and State governments; how their work can be coordinated. Research projects of the Board are divided into two major parts, the first devoted to economic and social and physical planning activities now going on, and the second dealing with planning for public works."

FOREIGN STUDY.

The Board's consultants have investigated corresponding activities in other countries, such as Italy's "bonifica integrale," Hitler's German public works programme, and the 10-year plan of the Soviet Republic.

"It would be a great mistake, however," said Mr. Eliot, "to assume that the Board is going to be led by European experience. We are not. We intend to follow American experience."—United Press.

SUSSEX COUNTY CRICKET DECLINE CONTINUES

DECISIVELY BEATEN BY SURREY AT OVAL

YORKSHIRE MADE TO FOLLOW ON AGAINST DERBY

NOTTS BEAT HAMPSHIRE BY EIGHT RUNS

The startling Sussex decline in the county cricket championship is being continued. Yesterday they were beaten outright by Surrey, and as a result Sussex, although retaining the leadership, have dropped in their percentage from 63.33 to 60.49. Lancashire, who have now played the same number of matches are only 1.35 behind Sussex.

Surrey held the upper hand throughout the match at the Oval. They dismissed Sussex for 242 in their first innings, and replied with 351, in the face of some brilliant bowling by Hammond, a young Sussex professional, who took 8 for 76. Sussex failed a second time at the wicket, being sent back for 168, and the London team, requiring 60

At one stage Hampshire seemed to have victory well within grasp. They led Notts by 97 on the first innings, and dismissed their opponents for 22 runs over the 200 mark when they batted a second time. But they reckoned without the cleverness of Voce and Gunn, who between them put Hampshire out for 117, the finish being most thrilling.

Notts totalled only 109 in their first innings, Creese taking 5 for 27 and Boyes 5 for 35. Hampshire replied with 206, Gunn alone troubling them. He captured 5 for 62.

Boyes again bowled well when Notts batted a second time. He took 6 for 95. But the final heroes were Voce (5 for 35) and Gunn (5 for 58), who dismissed Hampshire in the fourth innings for 117.

YORKSHIRE FOLLOW-ON.

Rain affected the Glamorgan v Middlesex match, but the Welshmen obtained first innings points following a smart declaration. Glamorgan hit up 213 for three wickets, Emrys Davies scoring 100 not out, and then sent back Middlesex for 104. Clay doing the damage with 7 for 43.

Yorkshire had to suffer defeat on first innings against Derbyshire, and were also given the unusual task of following on.

Derbyshire batted first and compiled 345. Some fine bowling by Mitchell, who took 5 for 81, saw Yorkshire all out for 187 and the follow-on was enforced. But Yorkshire easily played out time, scoring 97 without loss.

Worcester were lucky to save themselves from defeat against Leicester. At the close of play they were still seven runs behind with two wickets in hand.

Leicester thanks to Berry (145) and Wigginton (120 not out) ran up the useful score of 493. Worcester responded with 246, and following on, finished up 240 for 8. The results and individual scores were cable by Reuter.

MIXED BATHING

New Feature At European "Y"

The European Y.M.C.A. in Kowloon has introduced a new feature for the summer by extending the hours for mixed bathing in their fresh water bath.

It has been decided, at the request of a number of members, to institute mixed bathing every week day evening (excluding Saturdays and Sundays) from 9 p.m. to 10.15 p.m.

Formerly mixed bathing was allowed only twice weekly.

The second series unpaired road time trials were carried out on Thursday evening, two members of the Hongkong Cycling Club competing for the distances of 10 and 30 miles.

After unbroken rain almost throughout the day, the downpour ceased to allow the riders to be started by Mr. E. Munns shortly before 9 p.m. Some assistance was rendered to the competitors by an oblique wind on the outward sections of their rides, but this was countered by the opposition on the return. Rain fell before either rider finished and subsequently the roads were in a treacherous condition for the highly inflated racing tyres.

GOOD AVERAGE.

Mr. J. Coles was despatched first by the timekeeper at 5.45 p.m. and rode an improved trial to clock 34 mins. 10 secs. for his distance of 10 miles. At the half-way point he was found to be averaging 20 m.p.h. but the hard latter half succeeded in reducing his final average to 17.80 m.p.h.

Mr. H. A. G. Keates, starting one minute after Mr. Coles, caught the latter after covering three miles and reached the turning point (15 miles) in 40 1/2 mins. His return into the wind, with the last eight miles covered in rain and darkness, however, showed possession of a considerable reserve for the last half which was covered in a few seconds under 20 m.p.h. to clock a finishing time of 1 hr. 31 mins. 25 secs. Mr. Keates rode a new English machine fully equipped for touring, and used a dynamo

'VARSITY CRICKET MATCH

Full Description Of The Three Days' Play

TAME DRAW FOLLOWS OUTSTANDING BATTING PERFORMANCES

Below will be found a full description of the annual University cricket match between Oxford and Cambridge, as written by R. C. Robertson-Glasgow for the London Morning Post.

London, July 10. Unless Cambridge have contracted a sinister alliance with the weather clerk, who at the moment seems in his most stubborn mood—they can cherish very small hopes of beating Oxford at Lord's in the 90th Inter-Varsity match, which began yesterday.

With such a preponderance of batting strength in each eleven, the luck of the toss was a vital factor. Luck went with Oxford. They seized their chance by occupying the wicket all day for a total of 416, no fewer than 289 of which were made in a courageous fourth wicket stand between Townsend and Chalk.

A BAD START.

Undaunted by the loss of three wickets for 95 on a hard, true pitch, the succeeding batsmen, led by Townsend, slowly wore down the Cambridge bowling, which was not really effective until Davies came on after tea at 3.18 and caused a minor collapse with his spinners delivered from round the wicket. Chalk played the most attractive innings of the day, as Townsend's innings, though invaluable, was only impressive in its grim determination by means of which he stayed at the crease and made runs, and Pelham and Jehangir Khan, both with orthodox fields, opened the bowling to Walker and Townsend, and Walker was soon out. Jehangir induced him to put one up to short leg, where Pelham, failing for length, made a spectacular catch. De Sarum, who, as usual, gave the impression of seeing the ball almost before it left the bowler's hand, was just becoming a menace to Cambridge when he snicked a fast one into the wicket-keeper's hands.

Two wickets for 44 was an encouragement that exceeded the hopes of all but the most pronounced Cambridge partisan and it was a jubilant cry that greeted the news. His century, incidentally, was the 50th scored in inter-Varsity matches.

Heartened by this achievement, Davies proceeded to take charge of the Pavilion end for the remainder of the Oxford innings as if to demonstrate that he was far more than the average change bowler on such a pitch. With the score at 400, and his own individual total 192—only 45 short of the Nawab of Patnauli's record set up in 1932—Townsend's long innings came to an end. After starting shakily and giving two chances, he had shown fine endurance in refusing to sacrifice soundness for stroke play on a day when he was not seeing the ball perfectly. His playing of square cuts and cover drives was done with studied care. He hit eighteen boundaries and batted for five and a half hours.

A MINOR COLLAPSE.

Davies and Grimshaw, who kept a good length without turning the ball perceptibly, then had matters all their own way, and the innings finally realised 416. Davies taking five wickets for just over eight runs each.

ARMOUR LEADS

CANADIAN GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

DIEGEL'S POOR ROUND

Toronto, Aug. 3. Tommy Armour led the field by three strokes at the end of to-day's play in the Canadian Open Golf championship. Leo Diegel, who finished the first round four strokes better than Armour, had a wretched experience in putting to-day. He drove a prodigious length, but failed to make use of this advantage and finished five strokes behind Armour, a turn-over of nine strokes over 18 holes.

Gusty weather greeted the players to-day, although overhead it was dry with the sun shining. One of the best rounds of the day was that of Jack Little, who returned a card of 69. He putted magnificently.

Leading scores are:

T. Armour 69+73=142
J. Little 72+73=145
J. Little 77+69=146
L. Diegel 65+82=147

CORRESPONDENCE

R. Abbit And Leg Theory Bowling

To the Editor, Hongkong Telegraph.

Sir:—I would like to reply to R. Abbit's letter of yesterday. He seems to be very much in the air regarding the subject of his letter, and does not know whether to side with Larwood or against him. In one sentence he infers that Warner is biased in his anti-Jardine policy—inference that R. Abbit is for Larwood—and then later opposes Carr's attitude. The whole question is do we or do we not have leg theory, and R. Abbit supports both.

The memory of R. Abbit's scathing criticism of Bowes is still fresh, but Bowes' wonderful bowling is fresher. The general opinion is that our friend R. Abbit should devote his energies to something else off cricket. Could we discover from R. Abbit just which part of the south country he supports in the County Championship?

THE TYKE.

Davies will be remembered as the bowler who gained momentary fame by bowling Bradman for a duck at Cambridge this season.

In addition his fielding was a joy all day, and stood out with Human's as the best in a very fine display of run-saving. It was suicidal to attempt a short run to cover or a cover or to any place in the field where Human was stationed. Fowell missed two chances of stumping Tindall, but otherwise kept wicket admirably.

HARD COURT IN 1882

THE FIRST EVER LAID DOWN?

VETERAN MAKES CLAIM

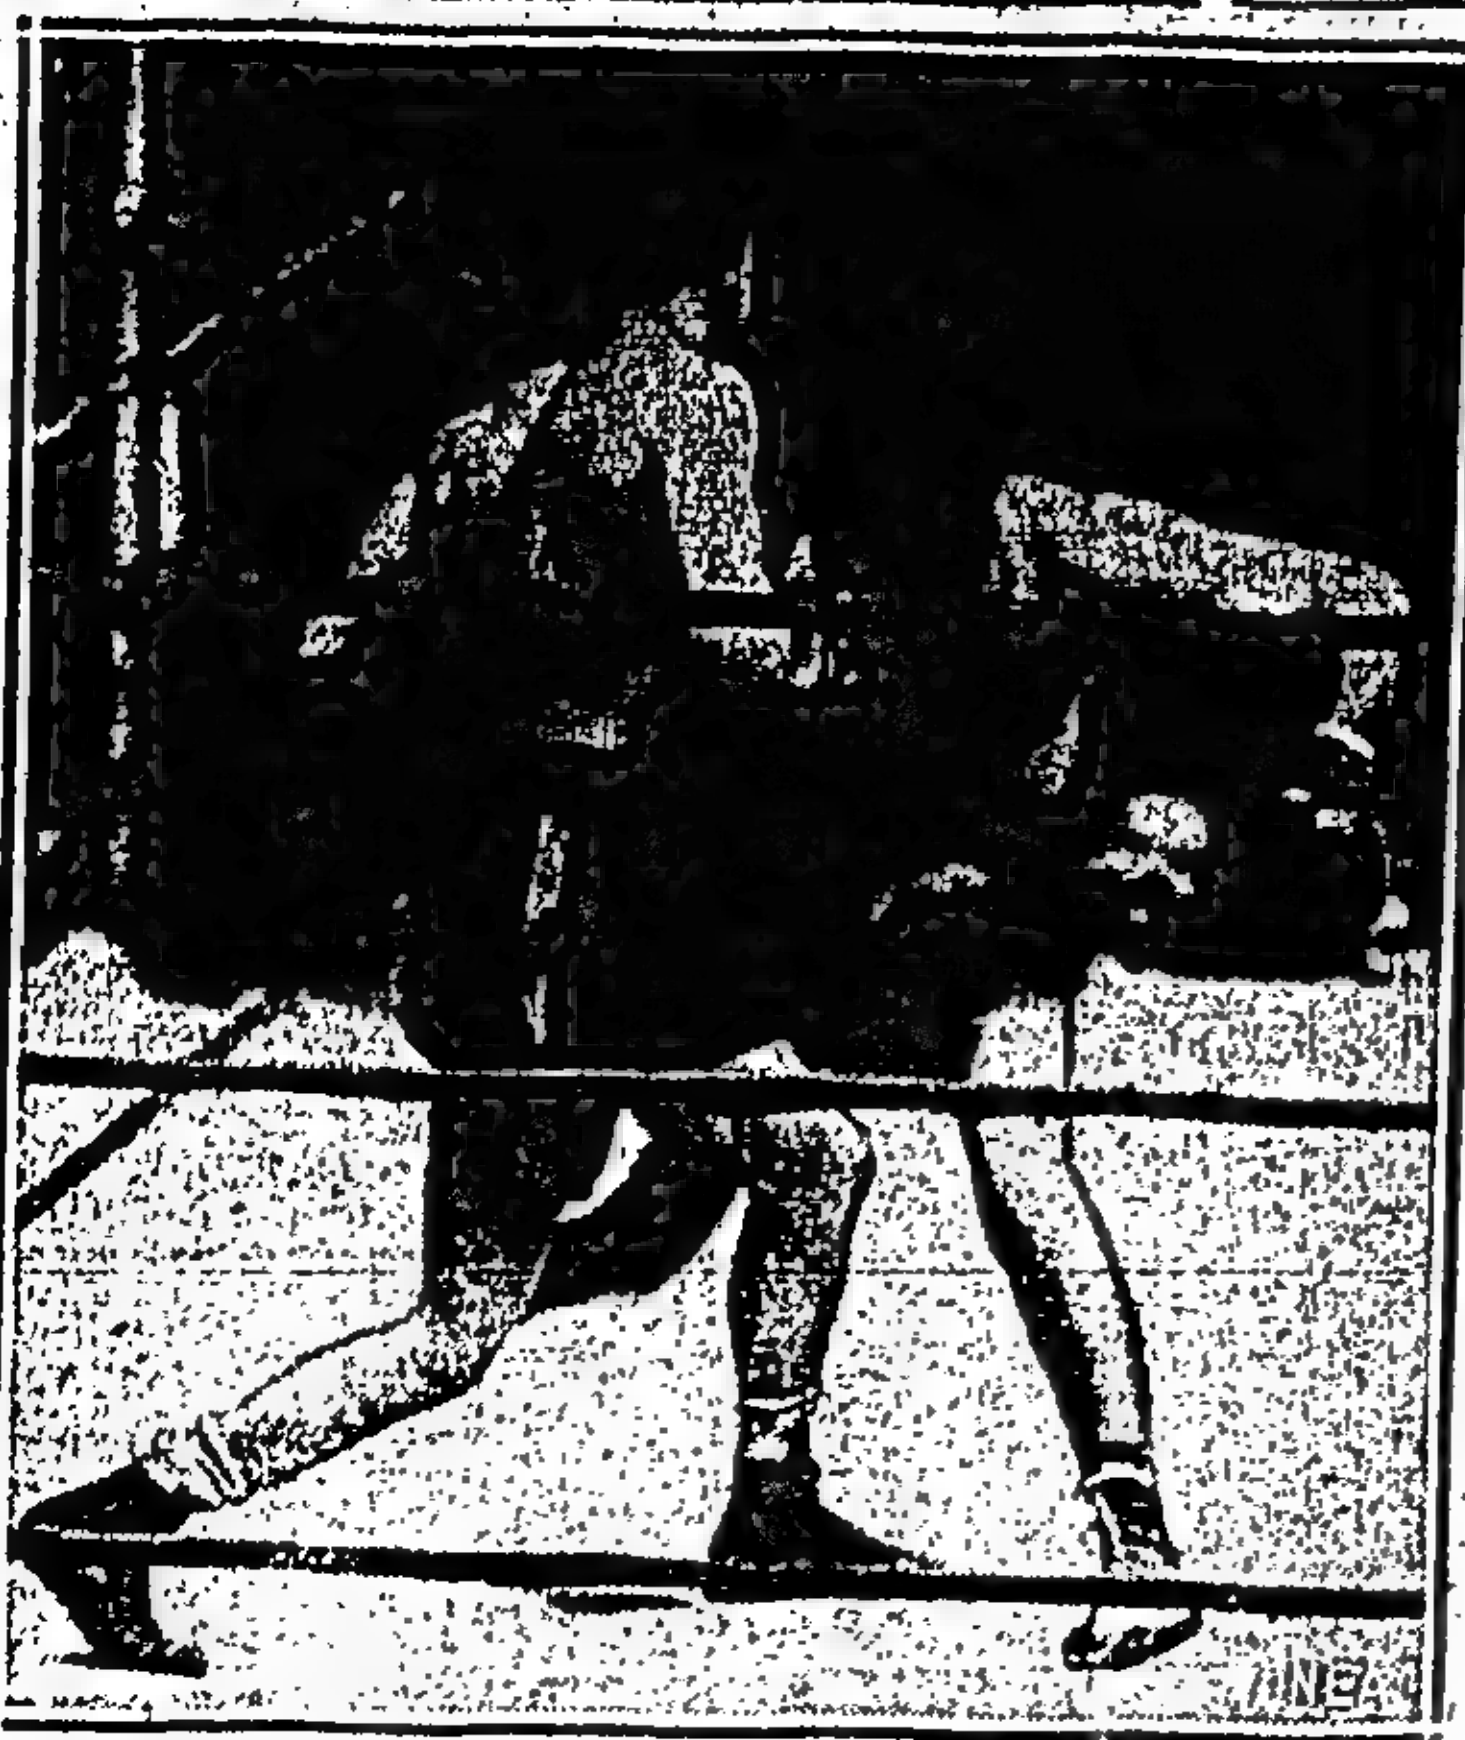

Ask any young lawn tennis player what was the date of the first hard court being laid down and I would guarantee that he would not put it earlier than the nineties—but he would be wrong, for the Putney Lawn Tennis Club possessed a hard court in 1882, writes "An Old Player" in Lawn Tennis and Badminton.

In what year it was laid I do not know, but I distinctly remember seeing two elderly (to me) gentlemen playing on it in the winter of 1885, what time I was cutting up the turf in football boots with an energetic preparatory school master showing us youngsters how to tackle and shoot.

It is funny what tricks memory plays. I can, for instance, recollect with the greatest clearness that the court was made of asphalt—not the grim grey kind which affords no contrast to the colour of the balls, but that sort of asphalt made with tar in which were embedded square white stones. And now having given that description I stand to be shot at by those better informed who may tell me that this was not asphalt at all! Well, whatever it was called, that is what it was made of, and there it was—in 1882.

SIMILAR BALL.

I have been asked if I recollect what type of ball was played with then. To the best of my knowledge and belief, though I wouldn't swear to it, the lawn tennis ball was covered in cloth as it is today, and it is strange to think that throughout the ages of lawn tennis, though improvements have been made in the appointments of the court—note the guy ropes for instance holding up the posts in the accompanying illustration—yet the cloth ball still survives though many experiments have been made to find one less impervious to the wear and tear on it given by any hard court.

on a score of 205 for the first wicket—were not fulfilled at Lord's yesterday, as ultimately they fell 15 short of Oxford's total of 415. The sun-baked pitch shows no signs of cracking, and it seems that nothing but a miracle (or a peculiarly violent attack of "Wimbledon throat") can deprive the gods of the drawn game they have so patiently been working for all the season.

Oxford's bowling was even more deficient in variety than that of Cambridge. After the event wisdom or not, there is no gainsaying the fact that the presence of the left-handers, Dyson, who was passed over at the last minute on account of the state of the ground, would have greatly relieved the tedium of the attack led by Tindall and Barlow, and thereafter shared equally by Singleton, Townsend, Mitchell-Innes, and Jackson. The latter, it is true, disposed of Human, who accordingly had no time to show what tremendous form he is in just now—but he did little else.

ALLEN'S EARLY ESCAPE.

Allen and Parker had not been batting long yesterday morning before Allen did precisely what Tindall wanted him to do: he pulled a short ball into the Saram's hands at long leg, but the catch was dropped, and Allen progressed quietly to 33, when he should have been stumped off Singleton. At this juncture he was batting uneasily, but, coincident with an improvement in his timing, so did he begin to revert his best off and straight drives. By lunch time he and Parker had put on 123, Parker being undefeated with 62 and Allen with 59.

The two went serenely on their way in the afternoon, scoring chiefly to the off, where both were exceptionally strong. Just after they had put up the 200 in three hours and it was developing into a race for the individual century, Allen drove a ball to Chalk at mid-off and started to run. The Oxford captain returned the ball in a flash to Knight, and restrained at first, Parker later opened his shoulders and drove with power, as the 11 boundary hits in his score testify. He deserved to reach three figures, whereas not even Allen's best friend would have ranked the Old Etonian's innings as one of the best he has played. It did enable him, however, to join the select few who have made centuries both in the Eton and Harrow and the 'Varsity matches, and, of course, was of inestimable worth to his side. His off-side strokes were perfectly executed. He hit 10 fours in his 115, scored out of 234.

OXFORD'S QUICK WICKETS.

Davies, never happy, was soon bowled by Barlow, but Winlaw proceeded to make 50 really grand runs—including no fewer than 8 fours—in 90 minutes. This was the brand of batting we had longed for after such a start, but "dat olo debbil," ten, upset every Cambridge calculation. Bartlett was unable to evade the hoodoo that has recently settled upon him, Jahangir Khan smote the air to no purpose, and only Grimshaw, who battled with copybook correctness, and was assisted temporarily but valiantly by Polham and King, withstood the effects of the cup that not only cheers, but so often exhilarates the fielding side.

The last seventy runs were as exciting to watch as any that had been made during the day, and Grimshaw was actually batting for 80 minutes before missing Tindall's faster one. His partnership with Polham realised 48 runs of the most vital importance.

Few had either expected or foretold that the 'Varsity match would end otherwise than in a draw. At the end of two days two large innings had been completed. There was no more dust on the pitch than might fall from an inefficient vacuum cleaner yet at about 3.10 Oxford had lost half their side for little over a hundred and seemed to be batting as if they feared Cambridge more than Surrey.

This was a false policy; for, when the last morning comes with things pretty equal, aggression must be superior to defence. Force the game, and, even though wickets fall, runs are there; and at such a moment, each run is worth much, in both time and arithmetic. Potter, and the fall of each wicket is a disaster. Instead of an event, Oxford pattered, and came near to losing the match.

Seamer saved his side; so in a less degree did Singleton, who made few runs at No. 11, but, with Seamer, played for 35 minutes, each second of which was golden to Oxford, London to Cambridge. Seamer might certainly have made more of many a half-volley, but he came in at a time when minutes meant more than runs.

WISDOM "POST EVENTUM."

There were those who criticised Human for keeping faith so long with Davies and Grimshaw. They argued that Pelham was the man. And they seemed to argue well when Pelham, called up at last, had Singleton caught. Wisdom "post eventum."

So easy! How great captains are in success, how futile in failure! I cannot criticise Human for his tactics. They came so near to bringing his side a wonderful victory.

Oxford began slowly in the morning. In the ninth over, when the total was eleven, Pelham disturbed Townsend's off-stump with a ball that was of good length and skidded the turf. Do Saram, one of many fine University batsmen who have been denied the final triumph, played a little carelessly at an off-ball, and was well caught by Human close to the ground in the gully. Walker, who turned Oxford into a snail, and the texture of the shell displeased many spectators.

Walker, who can be most brilliant, turned plodder. Mitchell-Innes apart from some good drives, joined in the weary walk. Walker, whose defence is very sound, was out shortly before lunch, and 76 for three meant that the giants of the past had no need to change the subject in the luncheon parlours.

The fourth wicket fell at 90. Chalk mis-hit a hook, after being plumed down for some overs by Davies—relieved only by one four to the Tavern—and the situation was interesting. Tindall desisted defence, but, when he had made 15, Davies had him. h.w. Jackson helped Seamer for a time, then was "yorked" by Jahangir, who relieved Grimshaw. Knight suffered the same fate, unless the stern are right to call yorkers half-volleys.

Then came two stands, brief in time, rich in value. Barlow then Singleton helping Seamer for 50 minutes in all. Had these two wickets fallen quickly, Human might now be free from criticism.

Cambridge needed 108 runs in one hour and 52 minutes. It was such that might have been beyond Hobbs and J. N. Crawford fifteen years ago. Jackson bowled from the Pavilion end, Barlow from the other. Chalk guarded the boundaries on the off, and though Allen and Parker found some runs at long-leg and past slip, the pace was too great to achieve.

They scored 53 in 30 minutes, and though that was good work, the clock Parker well catching low at short-leg. Human would have been run out easily off his first stroke, to wide mid-off, but Chalk's return just missed the stumps. At 71, Allen was run out off a silly hat was just too rash.

Jahangir came in next, but Singleton had him l.h.w. to a stroke that was justifiable but wholly futile.

That was the end of Cambridge's effort, and the last 25 minutes were tranquil and inevitable.

MOSCOW AND HER ATHLETES

DEMONSTRATION BY 13,000

OFFICIALS VERY PLEASED

Moscow, July 24. The annual parade of 130,000 sports men and women was held at the Red Square in Moscow today.

The platform of the Lenin's Mausoleum was occupied by Stalin, Kalinin, Molotov, Kaganovich, Voroshilov, Litvinov, Maxim Gorky and others. Among the guests were the entire diplomatic corps, and also H. G. Wells, who is now on a visit to Moscow.

The parade opened with a procession during which the columns of men and women, attired in gaily-coloured sports outfits of all known shades and colours, over-decorated the Red Square richly decorated with flowers and green. Every column carried emblems and samples of production of their particular plant or factory.

PHYSICAL CULTURE DISPLAY. After the march, 1,800 of the best physical culturists of Moscow performed in front of the platform. Taking their place, 800 students of the Higher Institute of Physical Culture demonstrated complicated exercises and a pantomime imitating a bayonet attack.

Air squadrons soaring over the Red Square demonstrated stunting, figures of highest school of pilotage, and flying in different formations.

The president of the High Council of Physical Culture of the U.S.S.R., Antipov, greeted the sportsmen and women, describing in his speech the tremendous growth of physical culture in the U.S.S.R., where the number of men and women engaged in physical culture reached this year 6,000,000 as against 4,000,000 last year. He pointed out that 1,700,000 persons already passed their tests for the "Ready for Labour and Defence" badge.

PERRY ENGAGED

TO BE MARRIED TO FILM ACTRESS

London, Aug. 3. Following the footsteps of H. W. "Bunny" Austin, who married the film actress, Miss Phyllis Konstam two years ago, Fred Perry, the British No. 1 singles tennis player and this year's champion at Wimbledon, is going to marry a film actress.

He has just announced his engagement to Miss Mary Lawson, of stage and film fame. The wedding is expected to take place when Perry returns from his American and Australian tours, in which he will defend his titles at Forest Hills and Melbourne.

His bride-to-be is one of the English starlets yet almost unseen. Her first film is Sound City's "Colonel Blood." She started acting at six when she came into the world during the War. She made her London debut in revue with Pearl White in 1925, and toured Australia while she was still in her teens.—Reuter.

FOOT FAULT RULE. London, Aug. 3. The special committee of the International Lawn Tennis Federation, appointed to go into the proposed change in the Foot Fault Rule, have recommended to the National Associations that an auxiliary line should be drawn at a distance of two feet behind the base line on the court. The server is to take up his stand on the auxiliary base line, and keep one foot behind it during delivery, the recommendation states.—Reuter.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

"Night Birds," coming to the Alhambra Theatre to-morrow, is the story of the tracking of an underworld killer, and is the last picture starring Jameson Thomas to be made in this country before he was "snapped up" by the Americans and went to Hollywood. Others in the cast of this picture include Muriel Angelus, an excellent "find" for the "Talkies"—she also appeared in "Sons Of Guns" at the London Hippodrome—Jack Raine, Eve Gray and Franklyn Bellamy. The story opens with a robbery at a society dinner party by a group of criminals led by "Flash Jack," whose knife-throwing is accurate and deadly. There is a murder, and Scotland Yard are quickly on the job. A detective tracks the knife-thrower to a night club, and makes the acquaintance of his girl friend. The murder of an informer at the club gives him a fresh clue, and after some exciting incidents the criminal is caught.

"Madame Spy"

One of the most interesting background displays of continental life during the World War is depicted in Universal's dramatic screen production, "Madame Spy," which co-stars Fay Wray and Nils Asther. The picture comes to the King's Theatre on Wednesday. Especially built sets, capturing the gay thoroughfares of Vienna, to grand ballroom banquets in Russian court life, were created for this production at a great cost to Universal, whose principal desire was to reproduce as faithfully as possible the scenes from which the picture was taken. With Karl Frensdorf, the director, an eminent authority on European manners, custom and scenic background, it was natural that he should personally supervise the construction of all the sets. One of the outstanding highlights in the picture is the "Cafe Marabu," with its intimate yet elaborate designed atmosphere. Another touch of real life is the hospital train, with its drab and sordid inmates, personifying the cruel and devastating results of battle. A splendid cast supports Miss Wray and Asther, including Edward Arnold, Nona Berry, John Miljan, Vince Barnett, David Torrence, Robert Ellis, Rolfe Lloyd and Mabel Marden.

"Smoky" At The Oriental

Taken from the pages of Will James' best seller "Smoky," Fox Film's release bearing the same title, comes to the Oriental Theatre on Sunday and Monday. Irene Bentley and Victor Jory have the romantic leads, while Will James is in a prominent role. "Smoky" is the story of a horse whose vicious hatred of men brands him a killer. During the course of his life, he befriends only one man, the man that has tamed and understood him. The friendship of the man and animal is great that when "Smoky" is stolen, his friend puts everything aside. In the years that follow, "Smoky" attains the reputation of the famous "cougar" of the rodeos, and then sinks to the depths of a junk man's cart horse. The film is said to portray the West with all its panoramic beauty, and to depict with astounding realism the colourful vigour of the rodeos.

"Stand Up and Cheer"

To-day at the King's Theatre Fox Film presents its biggest musical production of the new year, "Stand Up and Cheer," produced by Winfield Sheehan in association with Lew Brown. It is a magnificent show packed with stars, grand music and spectacular revues. Created against a background of ever-changing scenes and decorated with lavish splendour, are five breath-taking revues, among the many stars that lend their fine talents to the film, are Warner Baxter, Madge Evans, James Dunn, Ralph Morgan, Shirley Temple, Arthur Byron, John Bruce, Stephen Fichtel and Nigel Bruce. Supporting the splendid work of these performers is an array of radio and stage personalities among whom are Sylvia Froos, "Aunt Jeannette," Mitchell and Durant and Nick Foran. Director Hamilton MacFadden did a praiseworthy job from the original story idea suggested by Will Rogers and Philip Klein. Sammy Lee staged the dance numbers to Lew Brown's "Our Last Night Together," "Baby Take A Bow," "I'm Laughing," "Broadway's Gone Hill Billy" and "Out of the Red."

PROPERTY ACTION.

CROWN LAND BOUGHT FOR HOUSE BUILDING

An action concerning the purchase of Crown property to the value of over $220,000 was before the Chief Justice Mr. A. D. A. MacGregor, yesterday afternoon.

Plaintiff was Loke Yuen-cheong, merchant, of 18 Bonham Street East, represented by Mr. H. C. Macnamara, instructed by Mr. H. K. Huang of Messrs. Deacons.

Defendants who did not appear, were Tong Po-kau, draughtsman, of Feller Building, and Lai Tatsu-merch, of 192 Queen's Road Central.

A declaration was sought in respect of parcels of ground at Kowloon, held by the three parties as tenants in common, that they were under charge to plaintiff to the value of $220,000 and other sums including interest. Plaintiff also applied for a sale of property; an account to be taken between plaintiff and defendants relating to the premises, and payment of the amount found to be due.

Referring to the statement of claim, Mr. Macnamara said that in 1931, the parties purchased leasehold property from the Government of Hongkong, the total cost being $107,000, of which plaintiff contributed four-tenths and each of the defendants three-tenths. Tong Po-kau paid for his share, but Lai Tatsu-merch, the paternal uncle of plaintiff, borrowed his share from plaintiff. In December of that year, an agreement was drawn up, providing for development of the land by the building of houses additional parties to the agreement being Kom Tat-chuen and Wong Yuen-shan who, however, contributed nothing and were not interested in the present action. Plaintiff advanced large sums for this development, and some repayments were made by defendants, but, in July, 1933, Loke Yuen-cheong requested defendants to execute in his favour legal mortgages of their shares, to secure his advances of interest. This they declined to do; part of the premises had been sold and the sum applied in part payment to plaintiff. Two mortgages of portions of the premises had been effected, but the mortgages would not be injured by this action.

Plaintiff in his evidence agreed that he had found it impossible to make the property pay. He stated that he held property in Hongkong and the Straits Settlements.

His Lordship gave judgment with costs for plaintiff and made the declaration as applied; His Lordship ordered that accounts be taken by the Registrar; plaintiff was to be at liberty to sell the property, after taking of accounts, by public auction in one or more lots; all parties were to be at liberty to bid; terms and conditions to be settled by the Registrar and the balance of the purchase price after satisfying the mortgage to be paid into court. Liberty to apply was granted to the plaintiff.

ANNUAL MEETING

AUSTRALIAN AND NEW ZEALAND ASSOCIATION

A very satisfactory report was presented to the first annual general meeting of members of the Hongkong Australian and New Zealand Association, held in the Jacobean Room of the Hongkong Hotel last evening.

Apologies for absence were received from Mr. T. J. Mildren and Mr. H. Ching.

The meeting was presided over by Dr. H. D. Matthews, who in giving his report on the operations for the past year, said:

This Association came into being as an Association after a good deal of preparatory work, after a general meeting, held on May 1, 1933, at which 23 members were present. Six other members expressed their intention of joining, so that we began with a membership of 29.

There had been previously and was, at this meeting, a good deal of discussion as to the basis of membership, and on July 25 a sub-committee was appointed to suggest alterations to the rules, with a view to meeting this difficulty. This sub-committee's report was adopted on August 2 by the executive.

A general meeting was held on September 23, by which these alterations were made effective—the Association thus became the Australian and New Zealand Association of Hongkong and South China. In view of this change of constitution, the executive retired, and a new executive, consisting to a considerable extent of the same members, was elected at the general meeting on January 11. This executive has functioned to the present time. It was unfortunate that the early activities of the Association were to some extent spent on this question and it took up a great deal of time and energy. Once the change was decided, the existing executive felt hampered by the fact that it was soon to be replaced.

Criticism Drawn.

I am sure that everyone was and is glad that the change was effective, and that our New Zealand friends became full members of the Association, but it would have been much simpler if we could have begun in that way. The course followed has drawn some criticism by at least one New Zealander, on the ground that the existing Australian Association had no right to take the step outlined without dissolving itself and making a fresh start, after consultation with New Zealanders. I feel there is ground for this criticism, but the increase in membership shows that it is not generally held.

At the present time, our number of members is 85. Nine have left the Colony, leaving an effective membership of 76.

No member was lost by death, but we have had to express sympathy with (Continued on Page 12).

the claims made are proved a fallacy? Would you buy that article a second time? While advertising is a powerful force in educating as to the uses, merits or money saving advantages of a product, the people are the judges when they make their first purchase. 'Delivering the goods' is what they demand, and the scrap heap of failures is piled with goods that could not stand the test of public judgment. 'ASPRO' messages are carefully planned to prove what 'ASPRO' can do to alleviate pain and suffering, and the reason of its success throughout the civilised world is simple, because it fulfils its purity is its safety, and its quick action the healing service humanity appreciates. 'ASPRO' conforms to the standard of purity laid down by the British Pharmacopoeia (the guiding authority of the Medical Profession), and the 15 uses enumerated below make it an invaluable quick first-aid emergency in every home.

Great Relief After 14 Years' Suffering

Dear Sirs,
I have been suffering from Rheumatism and Rheumatoid Arthritis for 12 to 14 years. I have taken a course of your 'ASPRO' Tablets—three after each meal—and often, when in pain, have taken an extra dose before going to bed.
I obtained very great relief from this treatment; in fact, I do not know how I could have continued to move about without 'ASPRO'. ANNUAL MEETING

two members, Mr. A. W. Ingram and Mr. A. G. Mitchell.

Association Tiffin.

The Association, throughout its existence, has had to find its own way, with nothing very much to guide it. We have endeavoured to work, where possible, for Australian and New Zealand interests, and to promote social life among our members. The most frequent activity has been that of tiffin, which for some time we held monthly. These were enjoyable functions, giving an opportunity of fellowship and, I believe, served a very useful purpose. Later, a doubt arose as to whether they were not a hindrance rather than a help, and they have rather fallen off. Personally, I think this has been a mistake.

From the point of view of the executive, they had the merit of being the only activity that was a financial success. At some of our tiffin we have had the pleasure of entertaining guests from our Homeland. It is the pleasure on special tiffin the Australian University Rugby XV on their way to and from Japan, and later had the honour of entertaining the Hon. Mr. J. G. Latham and his party during their Goodwill Tour. This gave Mr. Latham an opportunity of making known the aims and ideals of his tour.

Attempts have been made to get into touch with travellers from Australia and New Zealand, but we have not been very successful. More perhaps, might have been done in this direction.

Two launch picnics were held, both very enjoyable. The first was well attended, though a financial loss.

Anniversary Dance.

Our most ambitious undertaking was the Anniversary Day dance. This was a very pleasant function and fairly well attended, but the executive felt they did not receive as much support from members as they had reason to expect. The fact that considerable amounts are still outstanding for tickets has made this, up to the present, a losing proposition financially. It was intended to hold two dances, one on the Australian Anniversary Day and one on the New Zealand Dominion Day. Our experience on the financial side makes it doubtful whether it is worth while carrying on with the idea.

The idea has been mooted for an Australian and New Zealand club and the executive has given this some consideration. So far nothing has been done.

Definite Value.

Looking back on the period under review, I think that we can feel that the Association has been of definite value and use, but while it has been moderately successful, I feel the emphasis is on the "moderately" rather than on the "successful." The increase in membership is satisfactory, but we had reason to hope for a bigger membership. All of our functions have been happy and pleasant, and, on the whole, successful, but could have been much more so if better supported. Financially, we have been in difficulty owing to the arrears in payment of some subscriptions and this has hampered our activity a great deal.

Personally, I have valued the honour and privilege of being your President and have appreciated the fellowship and friendship it has brought me. I hope that, during the coming year, the affairs of the Association will prosper more than they have done under my guidance, and that the Association will serve an even more useful purpose.

I would like to say how much I and the Association owe to the untiring efforts of our Secretary and Treasurer, whom most of the work has fallen on. I should also like to express an appreciation of the co-operation of the staffs of Lane, Crawford, the Hongkong Hotel and the Peninsula Hotel in our various functions.

The business members of the committee seem pleased with the balance sheet. Our assets are definitely greater on paper than our liabilities, but how far we will succeed in clearing the outstanding debts I do not know. It is planned to have the Treasurer take the sum of $100 has been collected since the balance sheet was printed.

Mr. Way Congratulated.

There is one further remark I would like to make before sitting down, and that is to congratulate Mr. J. R. Way, an untiring member of the executive during the past year, on his promotion, rather, on being

SUGAR PARLEY.

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE DISAGREES ON QUOTAS

Brussels, Aug. 3. The International Sugar Conference, at present in session here, has been unable to agree on the proposed revision of quotas. The conference, therefore, will be adjourned until September for another meeting, in either London or Brussels, after consulting the respective governments.—Reuter-Special.

given command of the Anzac Company of the Hongkong Volunteers. I feel sure that, under his guidance, the Company will flourish. I would also like to urge you all to help forward the interests of that Company. I feel, from the point of view of Australia and New Zealanders, that this is one of the most important of our organisations and each one of us should do his best to make the Company a real and thoroughly efficient country here in the Colony, and better to take a real effective and active part in the defence which may unfortunately become necessary.

Association Club.

The report of a sub-committee appointed to consider the formation of an Australian and New Zealand Club was read, in which it was pointed out that at least $800 per month would be required to start the Club. It was suggested that the members join one of the existing Clubs in the Colony but retain separate status.

The Chairman said he felt unless guarantors for the $800 were forthcoming the idea should not be proceeded with.

Mr. R. J. McNeill: I think it would be foolish to move in the matter, considering the state of our balance sheet.

Mr. Chairman: There has been a demand for a Club from some members of the Association, who felt strongly that such a move should be made. But they do not seem to be prepared to make a definite move themselves. If we could have a Club, I think it would be a good idea, but I have never seen the possibility or feasibility of it, especially since we have been so badly "dipped" over the Anniversary dance.

Mr. McNeill: We have a membership of 85 and there are many more Australians and New Zealanders in the Colony. If the members got the rest of the Australians and New Zealanders here into the Association, perhaps by next general meeting we should be numerically strong enough to start the Club. Many people do not know that we exist.

Mr. Tankin: I personally think it would be better if we were to wait a while until we are thoroughly strong. At present we cannot support a Club.

The officers for the ensuing year were elected, as follows: President, Dr. J. D. Matthews; vice-President, Mr. J. R. Way; Secretary, Mr. N. Stockton; Committee, Messrs. A. E. Hughes, J. Hunter, A. W. Ingram, J. M. Kelleher, R. J. McNeill, F. J. Neill.

ESTATE DUTY EVASION

COLONY PREPARES FOR ACTION

LOOPHOLE TO BE FILLED

Refusal by certain persons resident outside the jurisdiction of the Colony to answer claims for estate duty has led the Government to draft a Bill further to amend the Supreme Court Ordinance, 1873, in such a way that it will in future be possible to take action against such persons.

It is explained that the Crown Remedies Ordinance, 1875, the Crown Suits Ordinance, 1910, and sections 10 and 15 of the Estate Duty Ordinance, 1932, provide certain means whereby in Hongkong the Crown can enforce its civil claims, but nowhere is any procedure laid down whereby a claim can even be instituted, much less enforced, against a person who is resident outside the jurisdiction. Such procedure is provided in England by sections 37 and 38 of the Crown Suits, etc., Act, 1886, and by other enactments.

The necessity for giving the Crown the same powers in Hongkong as it has in England has recently been made abundantly clear by the refusal of certain persons, resident outside the jurisdiction, to answer a claim for a large amount of estate duty.

The amended proviso to s. 6 of the Supreme Court Ordinance, 1873, by introducing in Hongkong the same procedure on the revenue side as was in force in England in 1930 will make it possible for action to be taken against such persons.

The Hon. Treasurer of the Old Protestant Church & Cemeteries at Macao Restoration Fund, acknowledged with thanks a donation of $50 from His Excellency Sir William and Lady Peel. The amount previously acknowledged was $523.60.

POLICE INTERVENE IN CLAN FEUD

Eight Arrests in Raid on Teahouse

Some cause, attributed to "aquezoo" in one form or other, has excited a deadly feud between the lorry drivers and sandal workers of the Colony. The trouble commenced the other day by a lorry driver attacking a sandal worker at West Point, and as was to be expected, it grew by leaps and bounds until (according to those concerned) it could only be settled by combat.

Accordingly some twenty sandal workers and others belonging to the rattle and allied trades, whose sympathy and active support they have enlisted, met at the Tak Hing teahouse at Wanchai last night, the idea appearing to be that they would move to some convenient spot where they could meet the lorry drivers, who, on their side, had also made certain ominous preparations.

But before any disturbances actually occurred the police got wind of the affair, and a lightning raid on the teahouse followed, resulting in eight men being arrested. The remainder got away.

UNITED KINGDOM SHIPPING

LAST YEAR'S FIGURES SHOW INCREASE

London, Aug. 3. Shipping returns show that during the twelve months ended June 30th, the net register tonnage of ships which entered and left ports of the United Kingdom totalled 342,692,677, representing an increase of 14,412,895 or 4.4 per cent. over the previous 12 months.

Ships using the Port of London were of a total net register tonnage of 58,084,896, an increase of 3,606,776, or 6.7 per cent. over the previous 12 months.

Liverpool, the next largest port, had 33,348,783 net register tons, an increase of 5.1 per cent.—British Wireless.

JOCKEY CLUB'S DIFFICULTIES

CONCESSIONS BY GOVERNMENT

SLIDING SCALE FOR TAXES

Under the provisions of a proposed Bill to amend the Betting Duty Ordinance, 1931, the Government intends to repeal the section which lays down a definite percentage duty on pari-mutuel tickets and to substitute therefor a sliding scale to be fixed from time to time by the Legislative Council.

The duty on pari-mutuel tickets was fixed by the Betting Duty Ordinance, 1931, at 3% of the face value of each such ticket sold. By the Betting Duty Amendment Ordinance, 1933, the duty was reduced to 2½%.

For the year ending March 31st, 1934, the Hongkong Jockey Club's accounts showed a loss of over $30,000. Their gross receipts from the sale of pari-mutuel tickets were $4,841,930 and the duty paid thereon was $108,548.

It is thought possible that in the current year the gross receipts from this source may fall below $4,000,000.

In these circumstances, at the request of the Jockey Club, it has been considered fair to introduce a sliding scale to govern the payment of this duty, but to introduce such a scale into the body of the principal Ordinance would be cumbersome, especially as it is not necessarily intended to be final. Hence the amendment proposed by the amending Bill leaves the scale to be fixed by resolution of the Legislature.

The existing regulations in respect of public places of entertainment are being repealed and new ones instituted. The full text of the regulations appear in the Gazette.
